SPEAKER: JUDGE JOE KISNER

Not even judges are immune from jury duty. Though Joe Kisner, Judge of the Sedgwick County 18th Judicial Court Criminal Division, only had to walk across the hall to serve. He was quickly dismissed because he knew one of the parties in the case, though he hopes we are eager to serve.

Judge Kisner said the jails are overflowing. "They aren't hanging out the windows but that's only because the windows won't open."

He said family law, not drugs or gang cases, is the most dangerous for the safety of judges.

Judge Kisner said, "There aren't many bad people out there." The majority of the jail population is those with mental health issues and drug problems.

And with anticipated budget cuts, Sedgwick County is trying "Problem-solving court." Judge Kisner said, "It may not be great but what we're doing now is not working."

The goal is to keep the offender in the community, supervise the person several times per week, and have the person visit the court weekly to discuss what they're doing to improve.

Judge Joe said meth is "wicked" and he opposes the legalization of drugs

BUSINESS BRIEF: BILL MANESS

Bill Maness has a problem that many wish they had: his business is spectacular.

Bill started his company, Syndeo Outsourcing, in 1998 with a handful of employees. Now, there are 23 employees, over 100 clients, and 7000 individuals that Syndeo serves. "We're more interested in keeping our clients than getting new ones," Bill said. Syndeo provides human resource services to small businesses. "We do everything that an employer does for their employees," Bill said.

Those services include payroll, human resources, benefits, and workers compensation. Bill says his services are more cost-effective than an employers.

WHAT WOULD SCOOPY DO?

Greeter-Barbara Waitt Prayer-Marc Campbell Announcements-Lisa Callahan said Steve Houlik's company, Allen Gibbs & Houlik, was recently named one of the most outstanding places to work. Lisa theorized that this was because of the quality snacks in the break room...Lisa said she attended her daughter's birthday party and it became a surprise engagement party...for her daughter...Bill Maness said he made his first trip this year to New York, saw the Shockers win the NIT, attended the Masters golf tournament for the first time, and had his first grandson.

DON'T WORRY WHAT PEOPLE THINK, THEY DON'T DO IT OFTEN

Phil May is planning to be in Green Bay WI to see his beloved World Champion Packers play on Mon., Nov. 14 against Minnesota. Phil and his family will arrive in Titledown two days earlier so they can tour the stadium that Phil has toured numerous times, spend a half-day in the Packers memorabilia shop, and drink and dine at Curly's Bar at the top of Lambeau Field. Phil bought the tickets to the game at the Shocker Auction from Bob Long, the only one from Wichita State to play for the Packers. Because he's an ex-player, Long gets seats on the front row, directly behind the Packers bench.

"I'll be able to smell the grass on the field," Phil said.

Phil also owns two shares of the Packers, the community-owned franchise. Each summer, the Packers play host to their owners at Lambeau Field, they feed the 60,000 there, and, of course, there's a tour of the stadium.
