Speaker: Dr. H. David Wilson, KU Med School

Here are the doctor's orders: Walk, exercise, keep trim, and get enough rest. So says Dr. H. David Wilson, the new Dean of the KU School of Medicine in Wichita. Doing those things might prevent you from seeing a doctor, a profession that's becoming increasingly scarce. Dr. Wilson said we need 30% more physicians than we have now. Therefore, one of his tasks is to increase the Wichita branch from a two-year to a four-year school and add 50 spots for additional physician-students. "Older people need more care than younger people," Dr. Wilson said. "We also need more nurses and a variety of health care professionals." Currently, the Wichita school teaches 170 students yearly. "We especially need family doctors in rural Kansas and rural America," Dr. Wilson said. The speech goes something like this: You can make around $200,000 a year, live in a small town, and work long hours or you can make around $1 million a year, live in an exiting big city, and play golf on Wednesdays.

Medical students incur a debt of around $200,000

Yep, most students want the latter. Dr. Wilson also hopes to make Wichita a regional simulation center where students can train.

Travels-On a recent trip to Branson, Steph and I toured the Fantastic Caverns, a cave near Springfield. During part of the tour, when there were no lights, a small child said to his parent, "It's so dark, I can't see my eyes." We were in Scottsdale last weekend and the highlight was riding a Segway, also known as a human transporter. We rode for about 90 minutes on sidewalks, streets, gravel roads, and grass. We covered around six miles and had fun every second. It was 80 degrees in Scottsdale all three days we were there. The outside pool at the hotel is heated to 86 degrees so it's open 24 hours. Scottsdale is great now, though I'll pass on 122 degrees this summer.

A Segway costs several thousand dollars or you can rent one for around $75 for 90 minutes.
